PAMELA CROSS

AND SOMETIMES THEY KILL YOU

Confronting the Epidemic of Intimate Partner Violence

Despite decades of activism by feminists and their allies, women and their children continue to be subjected to family violence, including intimate partner violence (IPV) and femicide, in shocking numbers. Why have we failed to respond effectively to a social problem that affects millions of women and children?

Pamela Cross provides an in-depth look at IPV in Canada in her book And Sometimes They Kill You. Told in an engaging and accessible fashion, it weaves together Cross's personal experiences and reflections with the powerful stories of victims, survivors, and the alarming but convincing data.

This is a call to action for the all-of-society, revolutionary response to gender-based violence needed to build communities that are safe and healthy for everyone.

Pamela Cross is a feminist lawyer and respected expert on gender-based violence and the law. She has worked with women's equality and anti-violence organizations across Canada for the past 30 years. Pamela was an expert witness at the 2022 inquest into the murders of three women in Renfrew County and sits on the Domestic Violence Death Review Committee.
